ALABAMA COMPANIES

Opening in 1929, Goodyear's Gadsden factory has expanded over the years to its current size of 2.8 million square feet. Today, the company employs 1,500 to make passenger, radial light truck and mini-spare tires for Goodyear, Kelly and Dunlop brands. In 2009, Goodyear brought $20 million in goods and services from local vendors within a 50 mile radius.

Radial passenger and light truck tires are made at the 1.6 million-square-foot Tuscaloosa factory with 1,375 employees. In Dothan, 550 employees manufacture radial light truck tires and bias minispare. Michelin has spent more than $600 million in capital investment at its Alabama plants since 1990.

NAL is a leading manufacturer of automotive exterior lighting, supplying the world's most advanced automotive lighting products to virtually every automobile manufacturer in the United States. The Muscle Shoals facility produces both signal lamps and headlamps and employs over 1400 people.

Latex medical examination gloves are made in a 200,000-square-foot facility in the west Alabama town of Fayette. Located on a 40-acre site, Showa employs 245 to make gloves used by industry leaders Granger, Fisher Scientific and Fastenal. The company has invested $5 million in recent expansion and upgrades.
